The Body Taken to Chicago, Escorted by the President and Cabinet and a Large Number of Moura-

Washington, May 30.—The remains of Walter Quinton Gresham received the funeral honors accorded a soldier. Except John A. Logan, of Illinois, "no man, not of the regular army, has ever before been honored by the ordering out of the United States troops by the president to escort his remains.

A bright sun shed its rays over the military pageant which accompanied the funeral procession, and no more imposing spectacle has been witnessed since the last presidential inauguration, though the sadness of the occasion naturally dimmed its luster and the crowds were mute and reverent.

At 9:30 a. m. the body, which was lain in state Tuesday evening in the parlor in the apartments at the Arlington annex which the secretary had occupied during life, was removed from that resting place to the great East room of the White House. It was preceded by such a tribute of flowers as even Washington, the city of flowers, has seldom witnessed. The arrangements awaited the arrival of the president and his cabinet, who came with military promptitude. The president and acting Secretary of State Uhl entered the first carriage to follow the remains. Then came Secretary Carlisle, who unexpectedly returned to Washington, instead of joining the funeral train en route, as was intended, and Secretary Lamont. Next Attorney-General Olney and Postmaster-General Wilson and the Secretaries Herbert, Smith and Morton.

The preliminary services took place in the East room of the White House, which has witnessed some memorable obsequies, the last being those of President Harrison's wife, but which has never before been the scene of funeral services over a cabinet officer.

There was, further, this distinction in the day's sad ceremonies, that the draperies and other accessories were entirely military in character.

The United States troops, headed by the Marine band, formed on Seventeenth street, extending their line to the west gate of the White House. The artillery were parked along the outskirts of Lafavette square which separates the Arlington from the White House and their guns and caissons stretched the whole length of the south front of the treasury.

The military forces consisted of four troops of the Sixth cavalry from Fort Marine corps under Col. Heywood.

so well, for which he fought so bravely, and in whose defense he was so grieviously wounded, was the chief emblem of mourning round his funeral casket.

Bishop Hurst, of the Methodist Epis--copal church, conducted the services. He was a warm personal friend of the dead secretary, who himself was brought up in the Methodist faith, his father and mother belonging to that | church of Chicago, will officiate. The denomination.

THE DECORATIONS. The decorations of the East room for the funeral services there were most intention to make the occasion purely military, the American flag was predominant in the display. Wherever the eye wanders the Stars and Stripes were seen. Each of the four great saloon mirrors were half hidden by a large flag and every window curtained by hangings composed of the National standard, 20 feet long. These formed the background for an effective display of growing plants and cut flowers. Great spreading palms branched out from every window and alcove, and were surrounded by potted | that end and as to the reception of the oleanders and other greenery. White funeral party and the escort to the and gold flower-pots and innumerable varieties of evergreen were banked on the mantels and beneath them, and cut flowers were interspersed here and there, while wreaths of smilax entwined mirrors and windows and doorways. The effectiveness of the arrangement was greatly enhanced by the glow of electric lights, rendered soft through hemispheres of thick glass of a pinkish hue. The official and clerical force of the state department assembled at the department at 9:30 o'clock and proceeded to the White House in a body. Four of this number, Messrs. Renick, the chief clerk; Chilton, Haywood and H. diplomatic corps, while Messrs. Biddle and Keller, of the department, received the diplomats as they arrived at the entrance to the grounds.

Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador, as dean of the diplomatic corps, convened a meeting of the members of the diplomatic corps at his ambassy Tuesday evening, and they, after adopting suitable resolutions of sympathy on the occasion of the grievous loss which the government of the United States has sustained, determined to attend the funeral services in a body.

Similar action was also had by the justices of the supreme court.

The train is scheduled to arrive at Oakwood station shortly before 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon, and the final services at the vault will be held at the latter hour. Rev. Dr. McPherson, pastor of the Second Presbyterian services will be simple and brief, and at the conclusion the president and other members of the funeral party, with the exception of Mrs. Gresham elaborate and of exceeding beauty and the relatives of the deceased, will and impressiveness. THE NATION'S DEAD

Laid to Rest in Oakwoods Cometery, Chiengo, with Military and Civie Honors, in the Presence of a Multitude of Notables, Grand Army and Confederate Veterase and Citizens—The Cavalry Bugiers Sounded "Taps." CHICAGO, May 31.-Chicago yesterday interred the nation's dead. The funeral train bearing the body of Walter Q Gresham from the national capital reached its destination shortly after 2 o'clock, and with civic and miltary honors it was entombed in a vault at Oakwoods cemetery there to remain until a final burial place is

The gathering at the cemetery was made up of all ranks of men. There were detachments of the regular army and the state militia, representatives of the state legislature, the city council, the county board, the bar association and all the clubs in the city, together with thousands of citizens from all the walks of life. From Washington came the president of the United States and his cabinet, the members of the supreme court, senaors and congressmen, and officers of he armv.

But the most impressive feature of the gathering was the presence of thousands of veterans, both federal and confederate. The former had passed the forenoon in decorating the graves of their comrades, while the latter had gathered to unveil a monument in memory of the confederate prisoners who died at Camp Douglas and were buried in Oakwoods cemetery during the war. Soit came about that in the same burying ground where the dead of the "Lost Cause" were honored in the forenoon a distinguished federal general was laid to rest in the afternoon, mourned by those whom he had so gallantly fought against thirty years ago.

The Fifteenth infantry was ordered into the city from Fort Sheridan, accompanied by the Seventh cavalry and a light battery, under command of Capt. Capron. These troops were quickly transferred to the Sixtythird-street station of the Illinois Central railroad, where the most of the organizations had preceded them.

Upon the arrival of the funeral train at Woodlawn, or Sixty-third-street station, the troops, which were drawn up in parade formation, presented arms, and the drums gave forth the long roll, followed by a bugle salute.

The body was taken from the train by eight sergeants of the regular army and placed in a hearse drawn by six black horses. The procession was then formed as follows:

Platoon of Mounted Police. Fifteenth Infantry Band. Fifteenth United States Infantry, Lieut.-Col Henry Humphrey, Commanding. Ionorary Pallbearers-Judges Woods, Jenkins, Showalter, Ewing and Tuthill, and Thomas Dent, Edwin Walker. Charles H. Aldrich, W. R. Anderson, W. P. Black, George W. Smith and James L. High, in carriages. The Officiating Clergyman, Rev. Dr. McPher-

Military Order of the Loyal Legion. Chicago Bar Association Grand Army of the Republic. Representatives of the Illinois Legislature. Mayor and Members of the City Council. County Officials.

The procession, which formed or sixty-third street, moved west to reenwood avenue and then south to the cemetery, on Sixty-seventh street. As the procession turned west on Greenwood avenue the light battery fired a salute of thirteen guns, the number Gresham's army rank entitled him to, and also due him as a member of the cabinet.

Arriving at the entrance to the cemetery, the funeral cortege was met by he cavalry detachment, which was drawn up at the left of the entrance. The troopers presented sabers and the trumpeters sounded a salute. As the procession passed into the grounds it was met by a great throng of people, some of whom had been attending the dedication of the confederate monument, while othere were decorating the graves of federal solliers, and still others had come expressly to witness the funeral services over the dead secretary of state.

Slowly the long line moved through the densely-packed masses of people until the cemetery chapel was reached. Then the casket was taken from the hearse, and the distinguished party who had accompanied it from Washington were conducted to the chapel. The building is a small one, and held only a tithe of those who wished to hear the services, which were very simple and brief. There was a prayer by Dr. McPherson, who then read a scripture lesson. The choir of the Second Presbyterian church sang 'Lead, Kindly Light," and with the enediction the ceremonies came to an

The body was deposited in a crypt in the chapel, there to remain until the family decidesupon the place of the final interment.

At the conclusion of the commitment services the cavalry buglers sounded "taps" and the battery fired salute of twenty-one guns in honor of the president of the United States. This concluded the ceremonies.

Seventy-five miles below San Bless hurricane was encountered, and it was full scope of the plot of arson comes debated as to whether or not the ship to light, in which Schoenholz is the should attempt to gain partial shelter active agent, and for the moment at in the shallow and treacherous Banderas bay, which has rocks near its entrance, or whether it were better to breast of it, convinced that he was so push out to sea.

One local Mexican passenger, Dom Matias Moreno, says the report was no escape: As yet there were no warabout on the deck, and testifies that ants out for Schoenholz's fellow-conwhile cautiously steering for what to pirators. all appearances was the usual enthat it was hardly apparent to the trained senses of the pilots and captain. The captain ordered a slight locked up." change in the course and gave other instructions which were obeyedby the officers and crew. In a very few seconds after, the keel ground on a rock lightly and there was at once great excitement among the officers and crew, and fear on the part of the few passangers on deck. Following the danger signal, in less than tenseconds the great ship grunched on an unknown reef and a shudder ranthrough the hull from bow to stern.

The passengers sprang from their berths in terror and ran out on the decks, seveaming and praying in a paroxysm of fear as the awful truth began to-dawn upon them. The wind. howled and a dense pall of fog hung over the ship as she was tossed by the surges and began to pound herself to pieces upon the rocks. She rose and fell three times, and then a crash was heard. This was followed by silence for the space of a quarter of a minute. during which time only low sobbing was heard and muffled prayers.

"Man the boats!" trumpeted the captain after a short interval, in which another crash was heard. The boats had previously been made ready, with all the life savers placed at convenient places, although covered from the view of nervous passengers. Within three minutes of the first crash in the hull the ship began to reel from its upright balance, to settle and to sink in its free hinder part.

The scenes about the lifeboats were indescribable. According to all the testimony obtainable, the panicstricken passengers and the ship's forces struggled for first place, although, to the credit of the crew be it said, that few of the sailors or ship's people lost their presence of mind, but the passengers.

There were a number of children on the passenger list, and one of these was pitched overboard by a frenzied father, who aimed for one of the lifeboats while still upon the davits.

A woman of evident wealth and refinement among the passengers, whose name is thought to be Broslyn or Crosslyn, displayed remarkable presence of mind, and in the most trying moments passed among the frenzied throng exhorting the people to keep quiet and take particular care of the women and children.

Some of the passengers, not willing to await the chance of a place in the boats, seized the life belts and boldly cast themselves into the sea, where they were tossed lifelessly upon the waves or dashed against the rocks, which were easily observed from the fast sinking ship.

The first boat to be lowered with its heavy burden of humanity succeeded in clearing the ship's side, but was swept away in the fog. Of this load only one of the sailors is known to have escaped the engulfing flood which swept over the boat within five minutes after it was launched. A similar fate befell all the other boats with one exception.

the facts were ascertained nevertheless. Schoenholtz confessed to firing at least half a dozen houses in this city and Brooklyn by prearrangements for the insurance.

One "fire" in Yonkers was all prepared and ready when it was prewented by accident. So that didn't come off. The fires that "panned out" were all set with benzine on the bladder plan. This plan is as simple as it is effective. The doomed store or flat is sprinkled with alcohol, and a bladder filled with the inflammable stuff is suspended from the ceiling. Then it is set on fire, and when the flames reach the bladder there is an explosion which destroys the property, and every vestige of the manner in which the fire was set at the same time.

A similar result is obtained by turning on all the gas and letting one jet burn. The explosive point is reached in due time. These are the flash fires that so long puzzled the police and firemen. Morris Schoenholz was the expert irer who did the business, but he was himself simply the tool of the gang of fire adjusters, generaled by one upon the trail of whom the police are hot to-day. The adjuster was easily identified by the coincidence of his always hurrying up to settle the insurance. Even if another got ahead of him, he was in the end always the one who got the job. The police have the names of the whole coterie.

Morris Schoenholz is a Russian about 35 years old. His address, as registered on the police books, is 142 Lewis street. The police will say little about him, except that he has already | yield has been cut down, how much served a few years' sentence for arson. | cannot yet be judged. DUN'S COMMERCIAL REVIEW.

he Continued Rice in the Prices of Wheat and Cotton-Labor Troubles Less Threatening and the Volume of Trade, as Shown by Clearinghouse' Returns, Generally Increasing—injury to Cotton and Wheat.

NEW YORK, June L-R. G. Dun & low weekly r.. iew of trade, issued tolav. savs:

More far-reaching than any other change during the past week, if really warranted by facts is the continued ise in prices of wheat and cotton. Real scarsity of either would affect all business Happily there is still room to hope that accounts of injury are greatly exaggerated, although there has been some evidence during the week that both the great crops have suffered more than at first appeared. Other changes are almost all favorable; and some highly encouraging. Labor troubles are clearly less threatening: Monetary conditions are satisfactory, and the substan-demand is a good sign. Exchanges through the clearinghouses have been greatly inflated by speculation, and at this time last year were cut down by the coal strike, and toward the end! of The police were noncommittal, but May, 1893, greatly reduced by bank failures. But for the week they ex ceed last year's by 19 per cent. and fall only 5.6 per cent: below those of 1898, while the daily average for May is 26.9 percent. larger than last year, but 7119 percent. less than in 1893. Stock speculation has shrunk to less than half its volume three weeks ago, and is almost wholly confined to professionals, in spite of better earnings. The aggregate for May is 3.8 per cent. larger than last year, but 13.3 per cent. less than in 1893, causes above-mentioned affecting the comparison with both rears.

Lordon has done scarcely anything, though still taking bonds enough to prevent disturbance of exchange. Thedecline in railroad stocks averages-but 44 cents per share, and grain-carrying roads are supported with such tenacity as to show that railroad managers and owners have very small faith in: reports of injury to grain, Wheat on the other hand is largely supported by public buying, and the purchasing orders from farming regions are supposed to indicate an opinion of the yield. Yet wheat comes forward freely, as it would not at current prices if a short crop were as sured, and western receipts for the month have been 5,944,574 bushels against 5,525,258 last year.

Nor do Atlantie exports reflect in creased maste to buy abroad, amount ing in four weeks, flour included, to 6,183,420 bushels, against 7,916,790 last year. Accounts still indicate that spring wheat was not injured and promises well in spite of some reports: but in a few winter wheat states the at San Francisco will lessen the European demand upon Atlantic stocks. Corn is 216 cents lower, lard is 10 cents per 100 pounds higher, pork is 25 cents lower and hogs 20 cents per 100 pounds lower. Cotton continues strong because it is believed there will be much reduction in the yield per acre, as well as in acreage. No estimate based on definite information puts the decrease in acreage at more than 13.5 per cent., which, with a yield per acreage equal to last year's, would mean a crop of 8,400,000 bales. Months must pass before there can be anything definite known as to the probable yield per acre, unless widespread disaster comes,

but the market has been acting as though the future were known. Speculation has diminished in volume and the fact that takings of spinners have exceeded the maximum consumption over 400,000 bales in northern states and twice as much abroad, makes the commercial stocks in sight, 3,384,552 bales last week. look still larger. The advance this week has been only a sixteenth and it is supposed that the stronger speculators have realized. The manufacture is doing we'l, though not all 'the machinery is employed, but the demand has been better and there are occasional advances in prices of goods.

Sales of wool for the month have been 10,776,150 domestic and 10,035,600 foreign, against 10,891,700 domestic and 9,267,460 foreign in 1893, but stocks are rapidly accumulating, and at Chicago are said to be the largest ever carried. In prices there is no change.

The iron manufacture is gaining rapidly, and the average of prices else-where given, which had fallen since February 1 to 54.16 per cent. of the prices in October, 1890, has now risen to 59.14 per cent., most of the advance having been in May. Bessemer pig has been lifted to 11.65 and gray forge to 10.40 at Pittsburgh by the growing demand; tank steel plates are $5 per ton higher at Philadelphia, and nail producers have combined, raising wire nails to $1.15 and cut nails to $1 by carloads at Pittsburgh.

Failures for three weeks of May have shown liabilities amouning to $7,455,244, of which $2,642,609 were of manufacturing and $4,230,637 of trading concerns. For the same weeks last year the liabilities amounted to $7.782,633, of which $3,380,812 were of manufacturing and $3,275,275 of trading concerns.

The failures during the past week have been 215 in the United States. against 183 last year; and 34 in Canada, against 27 last year.

MAYBE CUBANS GOT IT. Fully Provisioned Sponging Boat Stolen, at Key West. JACKSONVILLE, Fla., June 1 .- On Wednesday night a sponging vessel fully provisioned, was stolen from its moorings at Key West and has since been missing. The vessel was presumably taken by Cuban syinpathizers. A soldier deserted from the United States barracks at the same point and is supposed to have joined the sloop.
